GUEST LECTURE

Josef Frank, Villa Beer, and the Relaxation of the Raumplan

This lecture explores Villa Beer in Vienna, designed by Josef Frank in collaboration with Oskar Wlach, as an example of an alternative approach to modern domestic architecture. Focusing on Frank's ideas of spatial freedom, comfort, and the fluid relationship between rooms, it examines his critical distance from Adolf Loos's Raumplan and his search for a more open and flexible way of living—one that places the needs of everyday life above rigid spatial hierarchies.
